

AUTHOR - Donal O'Kelly

Donal is an experienced law teacher and practitioner. For over twenty years he practiced as a barrister in London. He currently lives in Dublin where he works for the Bar Council of Ireland as Registrar to their Conduct Tribunal. He is also a part time lecturer in law and ethics at Trinity College, on their GP training programme.

EDITOR - Graham Reddie

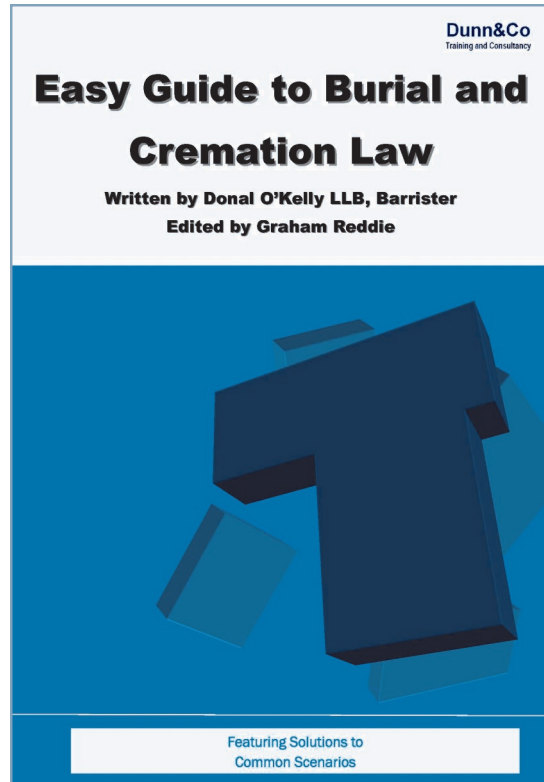

Graham has recently retired as a solicitor. He qualified in general practice in Reading and subsequently became solicitor to the War Graves Commission, a position which he held for some 30 years. With a special interest in cemetery and burial law he also sat on the Government's Burial and Cemeteries Advisory Group.

SUPPORT

Support will be provided by a team including Ron Dunn of Dunn&Co. Ron is a Fellow of the ICCM and was Director of Training and Development with the organisation for almost 7 years. He has over 25 years experience in the operation of cemeteries and crematoria.

Easy Guide to Burial and Cremation Law

Introducing the Easy Guide to Burial and Cremation Law due to be launched in April 2012 - A new approach is being taken to providing a reference book on burial and cremation law. The book is aimed to support more traditional books on the subject but provides a range of practical scenarios, explaining how the law should be used in solving the type of situations we have to deal with when running bereavement services.

A fresh, easy to read book written by the barrister and lecturer Donal O'Kelly and edited by the highly experienced, well known, former solicitor for the War Graves Commission, Graham Reddie.

Not only easy to read but you have the option of receiving annual updates and an annual support package at very cost effective prices. Dunn&Co, in conjunction with Graham Reddie will provide telephone and email advice for you, for a full 12 months and just being signed up for
